WARRING FACTIONS

Attempts Made to Blow up Gamblers Residence.

SHOOK THE NEIGHBORHOOD

An Attempt To Blow Up The Residence Of Ren Tennes, a Gambler, Was Made By Some Unknown, Armed With Steel Cased Bomb.

CHICAGO, July 26.—An attempt to blow up the residence of Ren Tennes, an alleged professional operator of gambling houses, was made last night by some person unknown to the police. The miscreant was armed with a steel cased bomb.

Five days ago a similar attempt was made to dynamite the saloon operated by former State Senator John F. O'Malley. This case had been kept secret. Both attacks, barren of serious results were in other respects similar to that recently made upon the residence of "Blind John" Condon, an associate of Tennes. At that time the front of Condon's library was blown out and the lives of the occupants of the house were saved only by the fact that they were in the back room at the time.

The whole series of incidents is said to grow out of jealousy between warring factions of gamblers and of efforts on the part of partisans of the opposition to frighten the men thus attacked.

In the attack last night on Tennes' house, the bomb exploded in a stone paved alley in the rear of Tennes' garage, which contained a new $5000 automobile, but it did no further damage than that of tearing a hole eight inches deep in the alley, breaking four windows in the Tennes house and splitting a plank eight inches thick in two.

The concussion shook the entire neighborhood and pieces of steel from the casing of the bomb were scattered over the premises.

The police searched the neighborhood for traces of the bomb thrower, but up to an early hour today had not found him.

The attempt against O'Malley's saloon occurred during the night last Saturday. Some person gained access to the basement and placed there a stick of dynamite to which was attached a time fuse. The explosion followed and that the engineer who was in another part of the basement was not injured was credited to the fact that the force of the explosion was expended in another direction. Only a dog was killed and no serious damage was done to the building.

A QUESTION OF TRANSPORTATION.

Secretary Root Makes Able Address Before Manufacturers Association.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 24.—In his comprehensive address delivered before the National Association of Manufacturers of the United States, at Washington, Secretary Root said: "Transportation sums up the trade relations of the United States with the entire world." It was the statement of a self-evident proposition and applicable no less, but even more, to the inland trade and commerce of the country than to the foreign trade and commerce. The facilities of the great railroad systems of the country are frankly admitted by their officials to be wholly inadequate to the demands made upon them by the merchants and the manufacturers of the United States and with equal frankness they concede that the problem of transportation must find its solution in the adequate improvement of the inland waterways and the harbor of the country. The necessity for the improvement of the highways of trade and commerce furnished by nature and too long neglected is not found only in the fact that they would furnish continuous means of transportation to the great inland markets of the country and to the harbors for the export trade, but it is also found in the inevitable fact that they would carry the raw material and the finished product at rates vastly less than the railway rates, in competition with the railways though not in antagonism to them.

That transportation sums up trade relations between the states—the International State Commerce of the country —in a vastly greater degree represented by figures enormously larger than it sums up the trade relations of the United States with the entire world, the bulletin issued from the Department of Commerce and Labor, "The Statistical Record of the Progress of the United States" amply and most conclusively demonstrates. For the year 1906 the value of exports from the United States was $1,743,864,500 and the value of the imports was $1,226,563,843—a most gratifying total of $2,970,428,343. But in the same year the total value of the farm products alone was $3,675,389,442; the value of the iron and steel products was $941,071,093; the value of wool manufactures was $80,934,093.
